DAWSON MAY FORCE STATE TO RETURN RESERVOIR PLANS

Borough Council Worried Over the Delay in Proposed Water Supply.

CEMETERY NAMED AS CAUSE

Gravestone Near Contemplated Site of Dam Thought to be Reason for Authorities' Action in Holding Back Approval of Specifications.

Steps have been taken by the Borough Council at Dawson toward investigating the delay by the State authorities in returning the plans and specifications of the new waterworks at that place. In accordance with the State laws, the plans and specifications were submitted soon after the contract was let to a McKeesport firm. Since then no word has been heard from the State authorities.

It was some time ago that the plans had been held up and while an inspector visited Dawson. The inspector made a trip to the site of the proposed reservoir and condemned it because of its proximity to a cemetery. Later, it was said, this was not true. The Borough Council thinks this may be the real cause of the delay, however.

The cemetery in question is more than a half mile from the proposed site of the reservoir. Medical authorities in Dawson say there would be no danger because of the reservoir location near the cemetery.

Several letters have been written to the State Department to ascertain the true cause of the delay, but there have been no answers, it is said. The matter may be taken up with attorneys to hasten the return of the plans.

The contract for the new reservoir was let shortly after it was found that the old reservoir could not furnish enough water. The lines from springs in the hills, the water source of the new reservoir, to the new one and from the reservoir to the town, were laid some weeks ago. Louis Costa of Dawson and Ray Smith of Connellsville, had the contracts.

TRAINS LOSE LITTLE TIME IN DETOURING OVER W. M. TRACKS

Handling of B. & O. Freight Business Expedited by Recent Order.

Working under a handicap, the P. & O. and Ohio Railroad companies made a new record in detouring trains over the Western Maryland tracks on schedule time. It was announced at the head B. & O. offices yesterday that only about five minutes is lost now by detouring.

The trains were very late the first day or two, due to the absence of locomotives and signals along the Western Maryland between Keystone and Cumberland. Arrangements for the safe operation of trains, however, were soon made and, it is said, there will be little.

Under the new order of the first of the week sending a part of the freight traffic over the "Shoepster" branch to Fairmont, the handling of freight is being expedited. All stock freight is sent over the "Shoepster" while fast freight and perishable goods are being detoured over the Western Maryland. All freight collected east of Connellsville is being detoured over the Western Maryland. Somerset coal also is being shipped over the Western Maryland.

EXPRESS REGULATION.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has taken a day off from its usual work to consider the proposed regulation of express companies. The commission finds that these companies have been exhibiting in their operations and in their conduct a disregard for the public interest and a disregard for the public interest in the transportation of goods.

The commission is not to inquire why an express company? He cannot understand why every railroad should not carry its own express matter just the same as it carries its own freight, and he will find it more difficult to understand why the express companies are not to be regulated.

STEEL, IRON AND COKE PRICES.

The upward trend of steel prices is not forced. It is the natural evolution of business. The demand for steel is large and the supply scarcely equal to the demand, hence the hardening of prices. Weak demand and overproduction would bring about a contrary result.

The same line of reasoning applies to the coke trade, and the very fact that this law invariably applies to coke prices indicates quite clearly that "the criminal combination in restraint of trade" which is holding furnace coke at $2.50 per ton on second half contracts exists only in the fanciful imagination of the far-sighted.

But perhaps the steel situation may eventually save the iron and coke situation. The furnacemen should ask a fair price for their iron. They are already selling below the Southern rate. The demand is good; equity warrants it. An increase in the steel interest would probably pay it, if not automatically at least uncomplainingly.

But in any event, it is plain that the furnacemen should not expect the price of their iron to be paid by the coke operators. The latter have followed enough of their own to foot the bills for.

A MAGNIFICENT RESIDENCE SECTION.

In the selection of a home site, care should be taken not only to find a place which affords natural advantages but one as well which is susceptible to the efforts of the home place developer. Such a place as this we have obtained in North Scottdale, located in the northern part of the city on the extension of Chestnut Street, in the direct line of improvements of all kinds. It is surrounded with natural advantages, being within only a few minutes' walk of Schools, Churches, and business Center of the City, making it the most desirable place in which to live, and with our improvements completed it will be the handsomest home section, not only of this city, but one that will challenge comparison with any in all the country.

"North Scottdale" is bound to become the most profitable investment property in Scottdale, just as has been the case with beautiful new home sections of other cities.

WE WANT YOU TO LOOK OVER "NORTH SCOTTDALÉ"
You cannot afford to neglect this opportunity to secure select property for building a home or for an investment of a portion of your monthly earnings. Scottdale property offers an excellent investment, for it will climb steadily in value while you are paying for it.

Remember that Real Estate values are now set in North Scottsdale very low, and are bound to increase steadily just as we have seen them grow with the progress of the country and this locality in the last few years.

"It was kind of you, men captain, to bring my lady her Marquis." An she spoke, she looked toward the garden.

"Why not?" he asked steadily. "This passport and orders were correct." "Were they, indeed?" she said, tapping the floor with her foot. "You remain with us a few days; or, as of old, must we be content with a brief visit?" she went on.

"We leave tomorrow." "Tomorrow?" The girl's eyes were a tentative expression. "Late?" "Early?"

"Oh! In that case, perhaps I shall have time." Nanette paused; looked at her father; old Pierre's slumbers were not to be broken.

"For what?" asked the Black Sergeant.

"To tell you something."

"Why not now?"

"You are inquisitive?"

"No."

"Even if it were about—"

toward the door that led to the garden.

"The Lady Elise?" he said quickly.

"Oh, you are interested? A man's heart is a moment's business. You do not use me?"

"Wherefore?" ironically, "when you have made up your mind to tell?"

"You are right?" She threw back her head. "I have made up my mind!"

How well you understand women! Almost as well, she laughed, looking at her father. "Is a ship?" He made no response.

"When you thanked me, men captain, for all I allowed you to say, I did for you, you may remember, her voice was so soft."

"I did not, once again, say so."

"You are right?" She threw back her head. "I have made up my mind!"

"You are right?" She threw back her head. "I have made up my mind!"

How well you understand women! Almost as well, she laughed, looking at her father. "Is a ship?" He made no response.

"When you thanked me, men captain, for all I allowed you to say, I did for you, you may remember, her voice was so soft."

His Dark, Eager Face Was Near Hers Now.

There is something I wanted to say, and—and felt I should have no other chance to tell you."

Had she read what was passing in his brain, she would not have faced him, so confident; but, ignorant of what he had learned, the cause of varying lights in his dark eyes, the tender play of emotion on his strong features, she broached her subject with straightforwardness of purpose.

"You went away so suddenly the last time. I had no opportunity, then, to thank you for all that you did; and so, I do now—thank you, I mean."

Also, a touch of prouder constraint in her tone, "I appreciate your over-generous proposal through Pierre's agency; although, of course," her lips were very straight, "I could not—it was impossible—to entertain it. But I am glad you were able to prove. You will understand—and," my lady ended quickly, "I thank you."

He looked at her long. "It is I who am in your debt."

"You?" her brows lifted.

"Yes."

"I don't think I quite understand."

In spite of herself and her resolution, her eyes seemed to shrink from a nameless something in his gaze.

"Nor I," Nanette was talking with her last right."

"Nanette?"

At that moment the space where they stood seemed, perhaps, too small; to turned, offering itself freely to his gaze.

At the neck of the rock, beneath his feet, the waves thundered; near them, wild birds circled, wheeled and were borne on by the strong breath of the wind. Had he spoken; what had he said? A gradual consciousness of the beating of the sea smote his senses, as with rhythmic regularity it arose. He listened; slowly in his eyes that light that demanded—claimed, as it were, its own—was replaced by another; his hands released hers. My lady made no sound; her proud lips trembled. Very pale, she leaned back. So silence lengthened. "Pardon, my Lady!" he said at last, very humbly. "It had not occurred to me my secret was not safe; that I, master of ships and men, should not be master of myself! But I had not expected to be alone with your Ladyship, and," a shadow of a smile crossed the strong, reckless face, "your Ladyship can weigh the provocation! If the excuse will not serve, I have none other to offer. Certainly, will I retract nothing. What's said, is said, and—no, he will waver!"

He looked at the water; the tide was nearly in; he turned. She would never see him again, for which she would be very glad, since the sight of him must always have been hateful to her. Had not fate decreed—bitterly—she should look upon him only as an enemy? It might be, in time, she would condone his presumption, when his presence would no longer vex her! He was going one way; she, another, soon, with—

"You—you are mistaken, Monsieur!" My lady's tone was tremendous.

"Mistaken?"

"The—Marquis de Beauvilliers left last night on a fishing bark."

"Fishing?" she asked, wheeled. "Why?" She did not answer. "You mean?" Before this sudden shift of question that shone from his eyes, here fell.

"Speak!" He seized her hand; his dark, eager face was near hers now. "You have sent him away? He will never return!" She lifted her head, answered not in words, but a new light in her eyes met the flash of his. "My Lady!" he cried, bewildered for the moment at what that glance revealed. An instant she seemed once more striving to combat him, when, drawing her gently toward him, he bent lower, kissed softly her lips.

"Is it, then, true?"

"You find it so hard to believe?"

"That you have done so? That I seem no longer your enemy?"

"My enemy? You! Who risked so much—saved my life! Ah, not for you not remember?" softly, "No, too late—forget!"

"Only remember I have long loved you! For me have you ever been the princess—who dwelt in the castle—in a palace, enchanted?" Her face changed. "That address you? Forgive me!"

"It seems like a dream—that life, then! All made up of lightness and gaiety; courtship and love measures, and—"

Beneath the bright fold of her hair, my lady, a brow knit.

"I know not until—just when! Only, for long, I seem to have lived in a world, unreal and false. Last night, when in the garden, I felt that I was married. Arranged, for what? She made a quick gesture. "The words came—had to come, though they hurt my lady's pride, touched his vanity! Letting deeper? It was gone. Done."

"My lady stopped. "Go on!" he urged, a voice eager.

"That is all at least, all I would know to myself, then."

"And now?" His arm tightened; he did my lady close. "Now?"

Her lips lifted, though silent, made no sound in the absurd moment of the moment, the past and all its vicissitudes, tributed only the present held them the present and the future, beautiful as the horizon, now rose and glowing beneath the warm touch of the dawn.

The tide came in and the tide went out.

"Non capitaine must have changed his mind," said old Pierre at the inn. And he gazed toward a ship, stranded at the sands of the harbor.

A REVOLVER TO RIGHT ALLEGED WRONG, HER WAY

Young Woman Takes Recalcitrant Lover From Mill at Scottdale.

OF REFINED DRESS AND MANNER

She Took No Chance on Man Escaping for Third Time and Was Prepared to Kill It Occasion Arrose. Couple Left on Afternoon Train.

Special to The Courier.

SCOTTDALE, July 15.—This is your last day in court. If you do not make your promise good, I'll shoot you as I would a dog. With these words a tall, fine-looking young woman, handsomely dressed, and with refined features and manner, drew a revolver from a handbag, and pointed it at the head of a man who stood before her, looking up at her with a determined and defiant expression.

The man who made his name as J. P. "Tommy" came to the United States from Italy a few years ago, and went to work there. Yesterday the young woman, who lived and was making money, was directed to him. The man worked with a chronic ailment and the two shared together the place when the man was in the hospital, but when he recovered him of the promise that he would be good to her, he began to be a nuisance, who one day the man shot with the revolver.

When the man went to dinner at the hotel where he was staying, the young woman, who was waiting for him, went to the room where he was staying, and found him in bed, looking ill. She went to the door, and found the man in bed, looking ill. She went to the door, and found the man in bed, looking ill.

ALLIANCE-SEIBRING BALL TEAM BELIEVED TO BE BROKEN UP.

Players: Trotter to go on Field because of Alleged Arrears in Pay.

ALLIANCE, O. July 15.—It is believed the Alliance-Seibring ball team of the O. & C. League is broken up. There was no game here with McKeesport yesterday as the result of financial difficulties.

Edwin Morgan, president of the Alliance-Seibring Club, filed each of the players $50 for alleged indebtedness. As a result they refused to play at all. Miller, Higgins and Wright being the only members of the team who appeared on the field to meet McKeesport. It is reported that their salaries are a month in arrears. President Morgan declared he was doing the best he could to raise the money but had been unable to do so.

News of Morgan's troubles with the players had spread among the fans in Alliance and several half a dozen persons gathered on the ball ground at the time for the calling of the game.

UNFILLED TON LIST OF U. S. STEEL GOOD BUSINESS GAUGE

Corporation's High Records Last Few Months Broken by Enormous Increase.

No better proof of the improvement in business over the last six months could be found than in the unfilled tonnage statement of the United States Steel Corporation. It is traditional that steel is the true barometer of the course of the country's business. This belief is based upon the fact that when the steel mills are active, the country is enjoying prosperity, as they are credited with consuming from 35 to 40 per cent of all the steel produced in the United States. When building operations are slack the structural steel mills of the country are doing very little. The great source of outlet for the wire mills is found in the great agricultural harvest, and when a crop prospers, no wonder it can be taken for granted that the American Steel & Wire Company and other like concerns are operating on a reduced scale.

Idleness of the tin plate mills would mean reduced operations for the can companies, which depend largely upon the crop as an outlet for their commodities. These and many other reasons are given as the basis for the belief that the steel industry is the true criterion of the course of the country's commerce and industry.

Since the first of last year the Steel Corporation has been establishing new high records in production, but notwithstanding this, its unfilled tonnage has shown an enormous increase. Shipments of the corporation in the second quarter of the current year ran very close to 5,200,000 tons, the highest in a decade. At no time since the organization of the corporation has it shipped more than 10,700,000 tons of steel in a full year. At the current rate its shipments for the full year would run very close to 11,000,000 tons. Unfortunately, the Steel Corporation is selling its products at prices lower than they have been in ten years, and because of this is not showing a large surplus in excess of dividends, interest, depreciation, and other requirements.

On a basis of normal prices U. S. Steel on its present shipments should be shipping at the rate of $175,000,000 a year in earnings, as its earnings for the second quarter are estimated around $25,000,000. For the current, or third quarter, the showing will be much better, and it would not be surprising if earnings ran in excess of $30,000,000. In fact, the rate of the United States Steel Corporation's earnings per ton of steel sold has averaged close to $15 per ton. Therefore, if this average had been in evidence in the second quarter, earnings on shipments of 3,200,000 tons would have been in excess of $48,000,000, or $25,000,000 more than the report which will be published on the last Tuesday of this month is expected to show.

That the Steel Corporation has avoided speculative sales of its commodities is evident from the fact that the situation as shown by the heavy tonnage has been exceptionally heavy. Consumers who contracted for steel are demanding deliveries on the date specified. The Corporation is eliminating from its books all contracts not specified against on stipulated dates, and as a result the unfilled tonnage reported is termed by the trade as "firm." When the Steel Corporation began business it was not a participant in the character of its orders, as it is now. The result was that it booked considerable speculative business which was not specified against, and the buyer could not see his way clear to secure profits on resales.

Now business of the Steel Corporation since the first of the month has been very close to production, but even if there is a shrinkage in July it would not be regarded as unsatisfactory, due to the fact that the steel mills have sufficient business on their books to keep steady operation for at least six months. It is regarded as remarkable by the trade that business holds so well in the face of such a prolonged period of increasing unemployment.
